Along the Trail

By J. B. YULE

MORE ABOUT THOSE WONDERFUL STRAWBERRIES

In the last issue of this paper, under the heading "Along the Trail," was a story about a box of wonderful strawberries from the Tribune staff by E. S. Stanley of Faust. The following note from Mr. Stanley was received:

"The berries are of a variety originally from the Central Experimental Farm. This variety is called the Louise, with seven others was sent me for trial. After two years I plowed them up, thinking none of them were of any value.

"Two of the berries survived the plow and bore such wonderful fruit runners they were saved and a small plot of some two dozen plants was set out a year ago last spring. This year more than 400 were planted.

"Points this variety will be for sale next spring.

"But more varieties were again sent for trial last spring.

"The fruit sent you were picked and packed as usual, without sorting at all time."

DISCUSSION

Grande Prairie, Aug. 7, 1938.

Dear Sir:

Many good resolutions have been made and broken. In the present case I am breaking my resolution to adduce in the future any subject unless and until the other fellow has properly studied his subject because your misunderstanding of the Prairie School Division's finances and your claim that the school is the store's future activities in Lindsay district may create a wrong impression in the minds of the public. Opinions in Lindsay appear to differ as to the future school population. Bursary money, which I myself have expressed the opinion that the future looks bright for an enrolment of from 60 to 70 pupils. While you and I may agree that it is never safe to prophesy as to the magnitude of the school's activities (without a Calendar, Ontario), we must face the fact that Lindsay has at present, and has had for years, too large a school population for one room. Definitely, even if the school were for one room to too many when all grades from I to IX are taught.

Advice as to economy also noted. Turn back to my last letter and you will find that I favor economy as far as the present picture on the service that the ratepayers have a right to demand.

On July 5, 1938, the ratepayers of Lindsay district, in meeting assembled voted in the high school. And Mr. Knochlyk, your pretty well served with a school teaching up to grade 12. Grade XI, Grade XII is actually the first year of a university course. You were in the school, but you know, a teacher capable of handling Grade XI. This I consider a high school. I am not a teacher, but I am a teacher of learning that, by the tone of your letter, you favor, but quite serviceable.

For one who told me on finance your use or misuse of figures is amazing. To make the point clear, let us take a hypothetical case. Suppose Mr. Knochlyk, that Bill Jones owes you $173,646.50. You in turn owe him $112,646.50. Would you would stand financially? To ascertain you would subtract $112,646.50 from $173,646.50 and find that you had a credit balance of $12,646.50. Your assets would, if only on paper, exceed your liabilities by that amount.

The above figures are your own, Mr. Knochlyk. The $173,646.50 is, you say, unpaid taxes, and so a debt of the division to you. But you know better. When they are paid will the money come out of the divisional treasury? No. It will be taken from the ratepayers. According to, to your figures, the liabilities of $112,646.50 and credit balance of $12,646.50. Well, well, I don't think that easy. Come to think of it when things look so bright, we should build more schools. But, Mr. Knochlyk, these are your figures and not mine. The picture is not quite so bright as that. However, to get the complete picture, I suggest that you call on Mr. George Patterson, the secretary of the divisional treasury, and ask him to give you a revelation to the board and his knowledge of the division's finances will be a revelation to you. Patterson is an obliging gentleman, but a busy one, so choose your time when it will least conflict with his work.

One more thought, Mr. Knochlyk. When you say that Mr. Walker and myself promised that a new school would not cost the ratepayers a cent I can't help wondering which of us was dreaming at the time. Lindsay was dreaming at the time. Or, here's another idea—possibly you had a vision of a school that you conjured up in mind and maybe you got just a mile confused in your finances.

To sum up my impressions of your letter, I find that:

(a) You do not want a public school;

(b) You do not want a high school; (c) You want a university; (d) The division is spending too much on the new Lindsay school; (e) The division could spend several thousand more for a small university.

(f) You favor economy.

Hoping for your better understanding of school affairs, I am,

Yours truly, J. L. McINTOSH.

WEMBLEY BOYS TELL HOW THEY LOCATED REMAINS OF MONKMAN PASS ROAD

In a letter three young men—Peter Dick and the two May brothers—of Wembley—write:

If there are any boys around there thinking about coming through, tell them it is no picnic and to come prepared and not leave their traps behind. They have to cross three good-sized rivers. They follow the road along a cliff beside the Mississippi river.

So the sharp-edged rock proved to be a weapon or knife. It would lend support to theories of Minnesota geologists that a skeleton uncovered near Pelican Rapids in 1931 was that of a primitive woman who lived at the edge of the great glaciers some 20,000 years ago, when the last great ice sheet was retreating northward.

So far, the "Minnesota man" has been the only find supporting the theory man lived in this area during the ice ages. His presence in Africa led to Europe has been established.

SCIENTISTS INTERESTED ON THIN ICE REMAINS HAD LIVED IN MINNESOTA

New evidence which may prove that a primitive woman lived in Minnesota during the great ice age attracted attention in scientific circles.

Scientists are interested in the remains of two glacial beavers unearthed by the Works Progress Administration workers in the last week along a cliff beside the Mississippi river.

So the sharp-edged rock proved to be a weapon or knife. It would lend support to theories of Minnesota geologists that a skeleton uncovered near Pelican Rapids in 1931 was that of a primitive woman who lived at the edge of the great glaciers some 20,000 years ago, when the last great ice sheet was retreating northward.

So far, the "Minnesota man" has been the only find supporting the theory man lived in this area during the ice ages. His presence in Africa led to Europe has been established.
